STATE LANDS

UPAC President Bruce Louthan recently sent a letter of authorization to Claudia F. Berry, Wayne Petty, and Michael Heyrend to represent UPAC in legal action against the State of Utah to ensure adherence to the laws of the state regarding antiquities. See a copy of this letter attached to the newsletter.

RUINS PRESERVATION CONSORTIUM

In concert with the Centennial celebration of the first documented stabilization work, at Casa Grande Ruins in southern Arizona, a new preservation society is proposed. The Ruins Preservation Consortium would provide a forum for information exchange among the disciplines dealing with ruins preservation/stabilization: archaeologists, prehistoric and historic architects, soil scientists and chemists, structural engineers, and other preservation practitioners who deal with stone, earthen, mud/adobe, or wooden structures built in the Native American or southwestern Euro-american traditions.

Potential topics of interest include but are not limited to (1) aspects of deterioration; (2) "hard science" studies; (3) preservation materials testing; (4) architectural documentation packages/case studies; (5) preservation philosophy, issues, project design and implementation; (6) anthropological studies of architecture, behavior, and proxemics; (7) condition assessments; and (8) training, education, and professional qualifications.

A questionnaire has been developed to help identify the appropriate level of information exchange (meetings, bulletins, journals, etc.) and the necessary dues structure to support the consortium. If you are interested in participating in this forum, please contact either Todd Metzger or Larry Nordby at 1028 Osage Circle, Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501, or telephone (505) 989-8528 or 988-6778.

SOCIETY OF PROFESSIONAL ARCHAEOLOGISTS

Relatively few Utah archaeologists belong to the Society of Professional Archaeologists (SOPA). The 1991 directory lists Michael Polk, Alan Schroedl, and Betsy Tipps. Perhaps the reason Utah archaeologists are not interested in SOPA is that it is not required in order to work in this state. Other parts of the country require membership in SOPA in order to work under specific municipality's, county's, or state's jurisdictions. For this reason California has a large number of SOPA members.

You do not have to join SOPA to be certified as meeting the basic criteria of a professional archaeologist. For more information contact the SOPA Secretary-Treasurer, J. Raymond Williams, Dept. of Anthropology, U. of South Florida, Tampa, FL 33620-8100, (813) 974-2138.

SOPA was organized in 1976 to establish national standards for archaeological practices and to identify those who possess the ability and willingness to meet national standards. It also represents the profession and gives more professional status to archaeologists.

An archaeologist who meets the criteria may qualify to be a member of SOPA under any of these categories; field research, collections research, archaeological administration, archaeological resource management, museology, teaching, underwater survey, historical archaeology, archeometric and national science research, underwater archaeology, and document research.

To obtain information on applying for membership in SOPA and the specific certification requirements for each category listed above, contact the SOPA Certification Chair, David L. Carlson, Dept. of Anthropology, Texas A and M University, College Station, TX 77843 (409) 845-4044.

UTAH ARCHAEOLOGY 1991

Articles for the next edition of Utah Archaeology 1991 are now being solicited. Joel Janetski has already received several articles but has room for more. Deadline for submission this year is the end of May.

UPAC MEETING MINUTES

The spring 1991 meeting was called to order at 1:30 pm on March 22 by President Bruce Louthan. Twentyfive members were in attendance. Gordon Topping, Superintendent, welcomed UPAC members to Fremont Indian State Park. Bruce Louthan introduced the new officers, Betsy Tipps as Vice-president for Governmental Affairs and Julie Howard as the new Secretary. These new officers will serve for two years. Bruce Louthan gave special thanks to Shelley Smith and Steve Simms for all the work they completed during their terms.

Treasurer Lorna Billat reported that the UPAC treasury has a balance of $4,118.92 as of March 22, 1991. Expenses from 10/27/90 to 3/11/91 total $1,164.47. Deposits for the same time period were $1,529. UPAC has 73 members, 66 voting. She will provide a list of members to the Newsletter Editor, for distribution.

Joel Janetski was honored with a plaque as the latest UPAC fellow.

Shelley Smith and Deanne Matheny discussed the status of State Lands Legal Action. At this point, all they've done is file suit with SUWA. They are continuing to look at state land sales. Shelley said they need a professional archaeologist to survey and note any sites present on these parcels and prepare an affidavit.

Steve Simms reported on the Reburial Committee developments. Since passage of the Native American Grave Protection and Repatriation Act on November 16, 1990, there is a new direction for the committee. Martin Wilson has proposed three drafts based on the new legislation, contact him to receive copies. The committee will complete their proposal by July. There will be two more meetings. Steve proposed that UPAC support the Northwest Band of Shoshoni to acquire funding and a burial site on Antelope Island (sacred rock art) to be used as a location to put a vault for reburial.

A motion was made by Steve Simms to support the Northwest Band of Shoshoni's request for federal funds and to acquire state land at a place of their choice. Jim Wilde seconded the motion. The vote passed with a majority of the voting members present.

Shelley Smith reported that UPAC has been asked as an organization for input on the SHPOs budget.

David Madsen reported on the State Regulation Committee. He said the law changed last year separating permitting from archeological vandalism. They have been working on the permitting regulations for a year using the Secretary of Interior's Standards as a guideline. He requested that UPAC have a representative at the next meeting. Betsy Tipps was selected as a representative.

A motion was made by Kevin Jones to establish UPAC as an affected party to potential or existing burial issues or situations. Joel Janetski seconded the motion and the vote was unanimous.

Bruce Louthan discussed the tax-free status of UPAC. Two provisions of the tax code are; a professional organization is allowed to lobby, but a charitable organization cannot lobby. UPAC qualifies as a professional organization that is non-profit, so we may lobby.

Pam Miller presented the goals and objectives of the Collections Documentation Committee prepared by the Castle Valley Chapter. Their groups is gathering and documenting information about local collections. UPAC members supported their efforts to acquire information.

Bruce presented a video on "Changing Paradigms" with a roundtable discussion of current and potential change. Presentations were; Kevin Jones on Research Structuring, Pam Miller on Professional-public Interface, Bruce Louthan on State-National Professional Organization Linkage, and Shelley Smith on Futures for UPAC.

AGENCY REPORTS

The Salt Lake District of the BLM is currently working on a MOA with the Division of State History and the Division of Water Resources to obtain information from vandalized Floating Island Cave. This cave was partially excavated during 1986 by the Division of State History and the BLM because the pumping project conducted by the Division of Water Resources would allow access to this pristine cave. Unfortunately, potholes were found in the unexcavated portion of the cave last fall and the BLM immediately proceeded to do what it could be salvage information and protect the resources it manages.

It is hoped that as a result of this long term agreement, the Division of State History and the Salt Lake District may continue research into understanding the prehistory of this relatively poorly known area. We will begin in May with a two-week investigation at Floating Island Cave and other sites in the area and continue this annually.

The district continues its surveys in Utah County as part of the cooperative cost share project with BYU's Museum of Peoples and Cultures, the Uinta National Forest, and USAS's Utah County and Salt Lake-Davis County Chapters. We continue field survey in the southern portion of Utah County and hope to interest BYU in testing some of the sites which may contribute to our understanding of the use of this area.

The district continues it's volunteer archaeological intern program and will use students this year to conduct survey of large land parcels on sand dunes in the west desert and near Grouse Creek in northwestern Utah for several large land exchanges.

We will greatly miss Shelley Smith, who has proved a very positive and productive influence in promoting cultural resources in the district. But we know that her skills will broaden and help to improve cultural resources on a statewide level.

NEW ARCHAEOLOGISTS

The Manti-LaSal National Forest recently hired Leeann Hunt as an archaeologist in the Monticello office. Leeann is from the El Dorado National Forest in California and will soon receive a master's degree from Northern Arizona University.

Nancy Coulam was recently hired as archaeologist for the National Park Service in Moab. She reports on May 7.

And, Shelley Smith was selected as the new cultural resources program leader in the Utah State Office of the BLM.

ARCHAEOLOGY JOBS

New archaeology jobs will soon be announced in the Tonopah and Elko Resource Areas of the BLM. More information on when these jobs open and how they will be advertised may be obtained from:

Dear Ms. Berry:

On behalf of the members of the Utah Professional Archaeological Council (UPAC), I request and authorize Claudia F. Berry, Wayne Petty, and Michael Heyrend to represent UPAC in legal action against the State of Utah to ensure adherence to the laws of the state regarding antiquities.

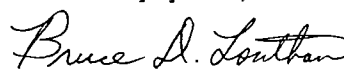

The members of UPAC are archaeologists working in public and private institutions, state and federal agencies, and as private consultants. They are affected professionally and financially by the quality of archaeological resources of the state, and are united in the desire to see adequate protection accorded these valuable assets.

Our organization and individual members have often voiced dissatisfaction to the Utah Division of State Lands and Forestry and other state agencies about numerous cases which, in our view, have disregarded antiquities laws and resulted in needless destruction of cultural and archaeological sites. Unfortunately, these protests have resulted in little or no change in overall policy and procedures of the agencies regarding antiquities.

UPAC is extremely concerned that the rich and varied archaeological resources of our state are being endangered through inadequate implementation of state laws and regulations by agencies developing, leasing, selling, or exchanging state lands. Legal action may be needed to correct this situation.

Please help us ensure that the laws of the State of Utah regarding antiquities are implemented and enforced. Let me know how I or any of our members can assist in this effort in any way.

Sincerely yours,

RE: REBURIAL OF HUMAN REMAINS ANCESTRAL TO THE NORTHWESTERN
BAND OF THE SHOSHONI NATION

Dear Representative Yates:

In testimony March 1, 1991 before your Appropriations Subcommittee on Interior and Related Agencies, the Northwestern Band of the Shoshoni Nation sought funding for a burial vault for ancestral human remains. The vault would provide a permanent resting place for skeletal remains repatriated to the Northwestern Band, with funds channeled via the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The Utah Professional Archaeological Council (UPAC) strongly endorses the construction of such a burial vault and urges you to support this request.

As you are aware, H.B. 5237 was passed late last year to begin the process of repatriation of Native American remains. Professional archaeologists in Utah are supportive of repatriation in consultation with local tribes, and Utah has been working toward a state solution that is congruent with the federal legislation. In July 1990, the Governor formed an Advisory Committee on Native American Reburial to help develop a long-term state policy.

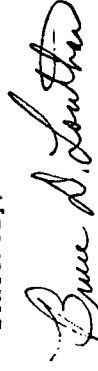

The Northwestern Band of the Shoshoni has played a leadership role in the work of the Reburial Committee because nearly 100 skeletons from their tribal territory are awaiting reburial. These burials, found on the northeast shore of the Great Salt Lake, are the second largest collection of prehistoric human remains ever encountered in the Great Basin region.

In deliberations of the Reburial Committee, an interesting convergence of interests has emerged. The Band recognizes the historical importance of the remains and understands their scientific potential. For their part, the scientific community recognizes the spiritual value of these remains and the moral imperative to properly inter them. A vault is the most far-sighted option since this would protect the remains, create a place where future finds can be reinterrred, and hold the potential for future scientific research should such be agreed upon via consultation.

At the Spring Meeting of UPAC on March 22, 1991, a resolution was passed to support the Northwestern Band in their effort to construct a burial vault to be located in a place agreeable to them. On behalf of UPAC, I urge you to support funding of this project when this matter arrives at your Senate Committee, probably later this spring. Please let me know if I can be of help in any way.

Sincerely,

RE: REBURIAL OF HUMAN REMAINS ANCESTRAL TO THE NORTHWESTERN
BAND OF THE SHOSHONI NATION.

Dear Governor Bangerter:

On behalf of the Utah Professional Archaeological Council (UPAC), I commend your efforts to protect Native American skeletal remains exposed along the Great Salt Lake and your formation of the Advisory Committee on Native American Reburial to help develop a long-term state policy.

The Northwestern Band of the Shoshoni Nation have played a leadership role in the work of the Reburial Committee. The 75 individuals recovered from the edge of the Great Salt Lake in 1990 along with a dozen more Shoshoni remains removed from the GSL area over the years and taken to the state medical examiner are of concern to the Shoshoni and to the scientific community. These skeletons comprise the second largest collection of human remains ever encountered in the Great Basin region. The Band recognizes the time-depth represented by the remains and understands their scientific potential. For their part, the scientific community recognizes the spiritual value of these remains and the moral imperative to properly inter them.

To move toward a solution, the Northwestern Band approached the U.S. House of Representatives for funding to construct a burial vault (Testimony to Committee on Appropriations, Subcommittee on Interior and Related Agencies 3/1/91). In a letter to you dated 11/27/90, the Band explained their position on these issues and sought your support in locating a site for a burial vault to inter the remains, most of which are from state lands.

UPAC is pleased with the Band's decision to seek a vault since this would protect the remains, create a place where future finds can be reinterred, and holds the potential for future scientific research should such be agreed upon via consultation. From the standpoint of the scientific community (which includes not only archaeologists, but physical anthropologists and medical researchers), reburial in a vault is the most far-sighted option.

This small underground site, likely on the order of a quarter acre or less in size, will be unobtrusive and will have no tourist purpose. It will be of practical value to the state and a spiritual place for the Shoshoni. Its location should be in concert with religious values held important in tribal history and in concert with contemporary spiritual values. Of course, the precise site will have to be evaluated in terms of logistics and construction needs, etc., but it is very important that the Shoshoni are an integral part of the site selection process.

At the Spring meeting of UPAC at Fremont State Park on March 22, 1991, a resolution was passed to support the Northwestern Band of the Shoshoni Nation in their effort to construct a burial vault to be located in a place agreeable to them. UPAC urges you to strongly consider the Band's views on this matter. We will continue to work with other interests in this important process that you have been so supportive of.
